

A BILL

To abolish the Bureau of the Census, repeal section 2 of title 13, United States Code, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Census Bureau Abolition Act of 2026”.

SECTION 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

- (1) The Bureau of the Census, a component of the Department of Commerce, conducts the decennial census and numerous other surveys of households and businesses, including the American Community Survey.
- (2) The functions of the Census Bureau are not “necessary and proper for carrying into Execution” any power vested by the Constitution in the Government of the United States and therefore find no support in Article I, Section 8, Clause 18, which Madison in Federalist No. 44 described as a means of executing powers already granted rather than a source of new ones, as the Anti-Federalist writer Brutus warned in his first essay of 1787 it would otherwise become.
- (3) By compelling, under penalty of law, disclosure of private information about households, incomes, and living arrangements beyond the enumeration of persons, the Census Bureau infringes the Fourth Amendment’s protection of “the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures,” and its requirement that no warrants shall issue “but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.”
- (4) By imposing penalties on persons who decline to disclose private information beyond the enumeration, the Census Bureau violates the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment, which provides that no person shall “be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law”.
- (5) In carrying out its functions, the Census Bureau disregards the Ninth Amendment, which provides that “The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people,” including the right of the people to order their own lives, property, and affairs free of federal direction in matters the Constitution does not commit to the Federal Government.

(6) The Constitution delegates to the United States no power over the collection of private information beyond the enumeration required by the Constitution. By compelling Americans to answer detailed questions about their households, incomes, and private lives beyond an enumeration of persons, the Census Bureau exercises powers that the Tenth Amendment reserves “to the States respectively, or to the people,” contrary to Federalist No. 45, in which Madison described the powers delegated to the Federal Government as “few and defined” and those remaining in the States as “numerous and indefinite.”

(7) The Declaration of Independence affirms that governments are instituted to secure the unalienable rights of the people and derive “their just powers from the consent of the governed,” and it charged the Crown with having “erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our people, and eat out their substance.” The Census Bureau perpetuates the centralized administration the Declaration condemned.

(8) Abolishing the Bureau of the Census and repealing section 2 of title 13, United States Code, will reduce the size and cost of the Federal Government, return to the States and to the people the powers the Constitution reserves to them, and restore the constitutional principles of limited government and enumerated powers.

SECTION 3. ABOLITION OF THE BUREAU OF THE CENSUS.

(a) In General.—The Bureau of the Census, a component of the Department of Commerce, is hereby abolished effective immediately following the enactment of this Act.

(b) Wind-Down Operations.—Immediately following the enactment of this Act, the President shall designate an appropriate official to expeditiously wind down the operations of the Bureau of the Census, ceasing all functions, except that the actual enumeration of persons for apportionment of Representatives, as authorized by Article I, Section 2, Clause 3, and Section 2 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution, shall be transferred to such other department or officer of the United States as determined by such official.

(c) Transfer of Assets and Liabilities.—All assets, liabilities, contracts, property, and records of the Bureau of the Census shall be transferred to the designated official under subsection (b) for appropriate disposition.

(d) Employee Transition.—Employees of the Bureau of the Census shall be offered opportunities for reassignment within the federal government or provided with severance and retraining assistance as prescribed by existing federal law.

SECTION 4. REPEAL OF PROVISIONS OF LAW ESTABLISHING THE BUREAU OF THE CENSUS.

(a) In General.—Section 2 of title 13, United States Code, and any other provision of law establishing the Bureau of the Census or vesting functions in the Bureau of the Census, are hereby repealed.

(b) Conforming Amendments.—The United States Code and all other relevant Federal laws are amended by—

(1) striking all references to the Bureau of the Census and to any office, officer, or function established in or vested in the Bureau of the Census;

(2) reassigning only the actual enumeration of persons for apportionment of Representatives, as authorized by Article I, Section 2, Clause 3, and Section 2 of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution, in accordance with section 3(b), and terminating every other function of the Bureau of the Census; and

(3) making such other conforming changes as necessary to reflect the repeal and the permanent abolition of the Bureau of the Census.

(c) Effective Date.—The repeal under this section shall take effect immediately following the enactment of this Act.

SECTION 5. TRANSITION PROVISIONS.

(a) No Restoration of Prior Structures.—No element of the Bureau of the Census shall revert to its organizational structure as it existed prior to the establishment of the Bureau of the Census, and no function of the Bureau of the Census shall be restored to any predecessor department, agency, or office.

(b) Permanent Abolition.—No department, agency, office, or other entity shall be established to carry out the functions of the Bureau of the Census abolished by this Act, other than the enumerated functions transferred under section 3(b).

SECTION 6. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this Act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the Act and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.
